Brief History of the University

1. The University of Vilnius was founded in 1578 by Bishop Protasevicius during the period of the Grand Duchy of Lithuania. With the authorization of King Stephanus Batory and the sanction of Pope Gregory XIII by Papal Bull in 1579, the University was authorized to confer academic degrees, Baccalaureus, Magister, Licenciate, Doctor.
2. In the space of a hundred years [1578-1678], the University of Vilnius became an international center of learning with students and professors coming from Lithuania, Byelorussia, Latvia, Ukraine, Poland, Estonia, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Germany, Hungary, France, Portugal, Spain, Italy, Flanders, Scotland and England.
3. The Swedish and Russian invasions of the latter half of the 17th century and the early 18th century interrupted the University's life, isolating it from the outside world and greatly restricting its academic activities. This period, nevertheless, produced such scholars as the Jesuit Skarga; Neo-Latin Poet Scarbievius; Lithuanian Historian Vijukas-Kojelavicius; Lexicographer Sirvydas, Jurist Olizarovius, Astronomer-Architect Zebrys-Zebrauskas and others.
4. With the dissolution of the Jesuit Order by Pope Clement XIV in 1773, the University of Vilnius became Schola Princeps Magni Ducatus Lithuaniae Sive Vilmensis. In 1773 there were two faculties, Medicine and Theology, later four faculties, Ethics-Jurisprudence; Physics; Medicine; Linguistics and Art. In the 19th century there was added a theological seminary. For several decades during the 18th century, the University was administered by the well-known Astronomer Rector Pocobutas, who was also head of the Lithuanian educational system, the University being its seat.
5. From 1803, the name of the University was Imperatoria Universitas Vilmensis. The University played a significant role in the cultural and political life of both Lithuania and Poland. It was at the University of Vilnius, that the Lithuanian national renaissance was born. For these national aspirations, Nicholas I of Russia closed the University, and it was only in 1918 that its doors were again opened, after protests from US Lithuanians and the Lithuanian people themselves.

6. During the occupation of Vilnius by the Poles (1918-1939), the University was renamed Stefan Batory, and continued to function under that name until the onset of World War II. The Lithuanians then formed the University of Kaunas (under the Statute of Vilnius University) within Lithuania proper. At the end of the Polish occupation (1939), the University of Vilnius was again returned to the jurisdiction of the Lithuanian Republic. Mykolas Birziska was elected the new president (Rector Magnificus) in 1940. With the Russian advance in June 1940 and the resulting occupation, and again in 1941 during the German occupation, the University of Vilnius became headquarters of the opposition, which pledged loyalty to Lithuania and resistance to the ~~German~~ invaders. At this time 1941 the University had six faculties:

Faculties	Departments
(a) Humanities	Philology History Philosophy
(b) Mathematics and Natural Sciences	Mathematics Physics Chemistry Biology Geology-Geography
(c) Jurisprudence
(d) Economics
(e) Medicine	Medicine Pharmacology Dentistry
(f) Forestry

The University numbered a faculty of about 500 professors of all categories, besides a staff of employees. Its libraries contained over 500 thousand volumes of books and manuscripts.

7. The second Russian occupation (1944) resulted in a catastrophe that not only drove the Lithuanians from their native land, but also destroyed their culture and education. The bulk of the faculty of both universities, Kaunas and Vilnius, and other academic institutions of the country, with their thousands of students, fled to the West and today are scattered in twenty countries.
8. After 1945 under Russian regime, the University of Vilnius was reorganized into seven faculties as follows:
- (a) Marxism-Leninism
  - (b) Jurisprudence
  - (c) Economics
  - (d) History-Philology
  - (e) Physics, Mathematics, Chemistry
  - (f) Medicine
  - (g) Natural Sciences
9. After the first Russian occupation (1941), the faculties were carefully screened for their political orientation towards Communism. Many of the professors remained in Lithuania and are still affiliated with the University. Some of them were dismissed and some were exiled to Siberia.
10. The following list of faculty members of the University of Vilnius consists of those who remained after the second Russian occupation in 1944. The list is based on the faculty University organization from 1941-44. The first title following the name indicates the academic rank in 1942-44. The rank indicated under the heading PRESENT TITLE is academic rank during the second Russian occupation (1944) and-- insofar as I can determine--present rank.
